DETAILED ACTION

1. This action is responsive to communications: Reconsideration, filed on 04/05/06.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-2, 5-8, 11-12 and 14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over McComb, US# 6,006,224 et al. in view of Culliss, US# 20030187837 A1.

As per claims 1, 5-6, 8, 12 and 14, McComb et al. teaches "a user to construct database queries . . . storing database queries" (see col. 5, lines 22-37) "query submission means for selecting between a constructed query . . ." (see col. 4, lines 7-21) "said query store being separate from said database" (see col. 7, lines 41-67). McComb et al. does not explicitly teach "a search tool operable to receive a user constructed database query and search the query store for a previously constructed query that resembles said user constructed database query . . .". Culliss teaches "a search tool operable to receive a user constructed database query and search the query store for a previously constructed query that resembles said user constructed database query . . ." (see paragraph [0053], [0005], and 0069]). It would have been obvious at the time of the invention for one of ordinary skill in the art to have combined the teachings of McComb and Culliss above, because using the steps of "a search tool operable to receive a user constructed database query and search the query store for a previously constructed query that resembles said user constructed database query . . .", would have given those skilled in the art the ability to retrieve previously stored/cached queries which are related with some similarities. This give users the advantage of receiving pertinent information that was cached discovered during a previous query request on similar subject matter.

As per claim 2, McComb et al. teaches "user input means . . . a database query . . ." (see col. 3, lines 62-67) "calculate a similarity factor between data fields . . ." (see col. 5, lines 10-37).

As per claim 7, McComb teaches "a user loading data to at least on data field in a database query" (see col. 14, lines 57-67).

As per claims 4 and 11, McComb et al. teaches "collecting management information data for a query submitted . . . structuring the management information . . . loading structured management . . ." (see col. 15, lines 26-67).

As per claim 14, this claim is rejected on grounds corresponding to the arguments given above for rejected claim 1 and is similarly rejected.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claims 3-4 and 9-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over McComb, US# 6,006,224 et al. in view of Culliss, US# 20030187837 A1., and further in view of Malloy, US# 5,787,234.

As per claims 3 and 9-10, McComb et al. does not explicitly teach "case based reasoning . . . does so to construct a query as a case." Malloy teaches "case based reasoning . . . does so to construct a query as a case" (see col. 2, lines 56-67 and col. 3, lines 1-12). It would have been obvious for one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have combined the teachings of McComb and Molly, because using steps of "case based reasoning . . .", because using the process involving case base reasoning would have given those skilled in the art the tools to apply a framework that users can use to produce query solutions, this give users that advantage of solving problems by examining descriptions of similar and previous problems.

Response to Arguments

6. Applicant's arguments filed 10/19/06 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

As per applicant's argument regarding "there is no teaching or suggestion in Culliss of selecting between a previously constructed user query and a similar previously constructed database query identified by a search tool . . . does not disclose or suggest anywhere, the selecting between a user constructed query . . .", examiner disagrees and maintains that Culliss's teachings of database queries and indexing of searching, reads on applicant's claim language. Further, Culliss's ability to present previous elements from a prior search, reads on applicant claim language involving the selecting between alternative database queries.

Conclusion

7. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
